The Newport paper headed the report of the Union convention last week with the scarehead of "Killarney Cats," and we thought for a time that we had a big joke on the aforesaid paper. But after pondering over the matter we have concluded that we laughed to soon, and that the paper was right after all. We have always heard it said that the lakes of Killarney were noted for their beauty and their peaceful and quite disposition, and so it was very proper to compare the convention with those lakes. Now if the paper had said "Kilkenny Cats," and compared the convention thereto we would have objected because we would then have thought that it was intended to infer that the convention was not quiet and peaceful, which would have been untrue, But Killarney Cats are all right if they are anything at all like the Killarn y takes. Then again, the editor of the aforesaid paper might have been under the influence of St. Patrick's day, and got his cats and

There was a sensation in this City last Tuesday forenoon and for a time a serious panic was threatened. The usual quiet town was aroused by a dim of lowing and bellowing that must have rivaled the roar and confusion when the children of Israel drove their flocks out of Egypt. Many slid off from dry goods boxes where they had been discussing the war news and asked each other what could it all mean. John Gaither said it was the forerunner of war; that similar sounds had been heard in the heavens previous to great wars in times past. Jim Ross said war had already broke out and that the spaniards had landed at Newport and were torturing the inhabitans. N. Snow said both were mistaken and the sounds were not earthley; that the Day of Judgement was at hand; and he hastened into the house to find a prayer book. But the mystery was soon explained: Al. Meaker had driven in fifty fine steers from the Salmom river, corralled them in the city limits and was branding them with a big M.

The plows with which we cultivate our fields, the drills with which we plant our grain, the machines by waich we harvest anb thresh it, and the very wagons with which we haul it to market are purchased from you. The lumbermen in our woods fell their timber with axes and saws made in Eastern forges. Why, Nr. Chairman, our infants are swaddled in clothing made by you. Our beds are covered with blanket from your looms, and even our dead are burried in coffins made east of the Missourie river. Whatever money we make we spend with you. I hope the gentleman from Missourie will not begrudge the farmers of Oregon rhe assistence contemplated by this measure, and if he does, then I hope, if he is supported by that slde of the house, that he and they will no The Albany Journal says: In the longer claim to be the friends of the Alaska hegira, now going on, it is farmers instead of the corporations.
